Course Description

This course examines the concept of “home” in the United States, and the competing cultural, political, and economic meanings that have been attached to American domesticity. Historically, the home has occupied a central place in the way that Americans think about gender, sexuality, race, and the organization of labor. The home is a frequent subject of political discourse, legal rulings, and economic planning. Projects of nation-building and national defense often use “home” and “nation” interchangeably. Depictions of domestic life, captured in phrases like the “nuclear family” and “the broken home,” provide the concept of home with further significance. Through an engagement with novels, film, advertising, and landscape and architectural design, this course will explore the importance that Americans have assigned to the concept of home, and why there is (allegedly) “no place like it.”

Learning Goals:

a) To assess the significance of home and domesticity in American life, and to evaluate in what ways these concepts, themes, and spatial arrangements have exercised a unique role in American politics, nation and empire building, economic organization, fiction and film, and in relationship to the construction of the categories of race, gender, and sexuality
b) To offer a detailed, nuanced, and sustained analysis of how home has been defined both normatively, and through radical and alternative perspectives
c) To understand how the concepts of home and domesticity are historical, and have changed over time

Required Readings

In addition to the above books, the assigned chapters, articles, and primary sources have been (or will be shortly) posted as .pdf files on the course’s SAKAI site, under the heading “Resources.”

Readings correspond to the day they will be discussed and need to be completed before class. You are required to bring readings to class with you, since we will refer to the text directly.

Assignment and Grading Overview

Additional information on the assignments will be provided in separate handouts, in the near future.

Blog Posts – 45% (Three, 15% each)

Using prompts and archival sources that I provide, each student will be required to “curate” three blog posts for our class site during the semester. These posts will double as short essay assignments.

Midterm Exam – 15% - Monday, March 10 (in class)

The midterm will consist of identifications and short answer questions.

Final Exam – 20% - Friday, May 9, 4 – 7PM

The final exam is cumulative, and will consist of identifications, short answer questions, and an essay question.

Participation/Attendance – 20%

This is a seminar, and the expectation is that you will both attend all the classes, and regularly participate.

Grading Scale:

92-100=A; 87-91=B+; 81-86=B; 77-80=C+; 70-76=C; 60-69=D; 0-59=F

Note: there are no minus grades at Rutgers.
Class Policies

Please make sure that you are receiving and checking SAKAI announcements via email.

I regularly use the site to update class information, assignments, etc. You are responsible for keeping up-to-date with class information and making sure that you are connected.

Attendance in the seminar is mandatory.

Each student is allowed one unexcused absence during the semester. Each additional unexcused absence will result in deductions from your participation grade.

Please do not text, use the internet, chat online, etc. during our seminar. If you do you will be marked as absent for that class.

If you have to miss class due to sickness, an emergency, or another excused reason, please use the University absence reporting website https://sims.rutgers.edu/ssra/ to indicate the date and reason for your absence. An email is automatically sent to me.

Unexcused late assignments will receive a deduction.

Special Accommodation Requests

All special accommodation requests must be brought to my attention during the first two weeks of class. Full disability policies and procedures are available for review at: http://disabilityservices.rutgers.edu/

Students with disabilities requesting accommodations must follow the procedures outlined at http://disabilityservices.rutgers.edu/request.html

Academic Integrity Policy

AVOIDING PLAGIARISM

In this class we will take cheating very seriously. All suspected cases of cheating and plagiarism will be automatically referred to the Office of Judicial Affairs, and we will recommend penalties appropriate to the gravity of the infraction.

Plagiarism: Plagiarism is the use of another person’s words, ideas, or results without giving that person appropriate credit. To avoid plagiarism, every direct quotation must be identified by quotation marks or appropriate indentation and both direct quotation and paraphrasing must be cited properly according to the accepted format for the particular discipline or as required by the instructor.

Some common examples of plagiarism are:

- Copying word for word (i.e. quoting directly) from an oral, printed, or electronic source without proper attribution.
- Paraphrasing without proper attribution, i.e., presenting in one’s own words another person’s written words or ideas as if they were one’s own.
- Submitting a purchased or downloaded term paper or other materials to satisfy a course requirement.
- Incorporating into one’s work graphs, drawings, photographs, diagrams, tables, spreadsheets, computer programs, or other nontextual material from other sources without proper attribution.

A SPECIAL NOTE: Students often assume that because information is available on the Web it is public information, does not need to be formally referenced, and can be used without attribution. This is a mistake. All information and ideas that you derive from other sources, whether written, spoken, or electronic, must be attributed to their original source. Such sources include not just written or electronic materials, but people with whom you may discuss your ideas, such as your roommate, friends, or family members. The more important point: think about what you are basing and argument or assessment on in terms of where it comes from, and how the source must be evaluated. Judgments about plagiarism can be subtle. If you have any questions, please feel free to ask for guidance from your instructor.
